

April 4, 2013
Hearing for Baxter Jones
231 W Lafayette
Courtroom 1042
9:30 a.m.

Law is a systematic tool ideally created to provide order and civility in our society. It is expected to be both fair and impartial. Justice is the interpretation and enforcement of law and is expected to provide protection for all citizens regardless of ability, social or economic status in life. If the result of that interpretation and enforcement is utilized to advance greed and punish need, the underlying foundation of law's intent is inherently broken.

Today I appear before this honorable court disabled yet still a human being relying on a system that will render a decision that does not infringe upon my constitutional or human rights. I seek justice in the form of an opportunity that grants a continued stay of eviction, and a reasonable amount of time to continue the ongoing negotiations that are presently in effect, and that will ultimately result in being able to remain in and owning my home.

I believe that such a decision will be in the overall best interest of all that are concerned.