

STOP THE EVICTION OF S. BAXTER JONES

S. Baxter Jones was a Detroit school teacher for over 20 years. He suffered traumatic brain injury in 2005 and is severely disabled. Mr. Jones fell behind on his mortgage while waiting for Social Security and his pension to be processed. He wrote to Wells Fargo explaining his situation and had a phone conference with them to discuss a loan modification.

Wells Fargo refused to work with Mr. Jones and went ahead with foreclosure, even though he started getting Social Security benefits. He faces imminent eviction from his home (where he has lived since 2002 in Jackson, Michigan). What makes this even more outrageous is that Mr. Jones' loan was sold to Fannie Mae which has been taken over by the federal government. That means our tax dollars are being used to throw this disabled former school teacher into the street.
